

Tatiana Hyman

Tatiana Hyman is a second-year J.D. Candidate at Fordham University School of Law and was born and raised in the Bronx, NY. She is an alum of the Prep for Prep 9 program and graduated from The Loomis Chaffee School in Windsor, CT. Thereafter, she attended the University of Pennsylvania, where she received a B.A. in Criminology with minors in Africana Studies and African Studies in 2017. Throughout her high school and college careers, Tatiana participated in internships that exposed her to varying facets of the legal field, including private sector, public sector, and in-house. Before law school, Tatiana was a Compliance Analyst at Morgan Stanley and participated in the SEO Law Fellowship Program. Tatiana remains active in her law school community as the Vice President of Fordham's Black Law Students Association, a member of the Law Review and Moot Court, and a teaching assistant and tutor. As the daughter of Jamaican immigrants and a first-generation college graduate, Tatiana is passionate about mentorship, educational equity, and leveraging her educational and professional experiences to empower underrepresented students.
