

MARY MASSARON

Mary has been an appellate lawyer with Plunkett Cooney, practicing in state and federal courts throughout the country for thirty years. She is a member of the American Academy of Appellate Lawyers, the American Law Institute (ALI), and former chair of the Michigan Appellate Practice Section and the Michigan Appellate Bench Bar Conference Foundation. A regular before the Michigan Supreme Court where she clerked for Justice Patricia J. Boyle, she currently chairs its Advocates Guild. She has twice received WMU Cooley Law School's distinguished brief award. She is a past President of DRI –

The Voice of the Defense Bar and of Lawyers for Civil Justice. She has briefed issues involving admissibility of expert evidence in state and federal courts, including in an amicus brief on behalf of DRI in In re Accutane Litigation, which led to a decision by the New Jersey Supreme Court to overturn lower courts and adopt the federal standard for admission of expert evidence.