THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE OF WOMEN AND LAW IN AFRICA

Honorable Ari Tobi-Aiyemo is a retired magistrate-judge from Nigeria, West Africa. She is the first dark-skinned woman to obtain a masters in judicial studies degree globally. She is presently an adjunct professor of business law at Hartwick College, Oneonta, New York. She is a prolific writer and an audacious speaker.

Please join her in this conversation that will focus on the pre-colonial to post-colonial experiences of African women in law, from a jurisprudential viewpoint.
